Gone is the little red schoolhouse and,
with it, McGuffey's Reader and Dr. Noah
Webster's famous "blue back" speller.
But there are those who remember.
My mother remembers, and so does my grandfather.
My grandfather remembers many things,
wonderful things.
And well he should.
He is 96, and his mind is as clear as a school bell on a frosty morning.

THE MOUNTAIN DULCIMER

Play me a tune, the boy would beg, play me a tune on the dulcimer.
And because my father at eight was the apple of his grandfather's eye, he would take down the rare, old instrument hanging over the fireplace.
Then in the firelight of the winter night with the chant of the trees in obligato, he would pick out the old, old tunes which his own grandsires had fetched from over the seas.
The boy grown to man remembered and told his son how it was when he sat at his grandfather's feet and listened to him play the dulcimer . . .
Play me a tune, play me a tune on the dulcimer.

Victor Hugo (1802 - 1885)

L'oeuvre de Victor Hugo est si immense et si variée qu'il est impossible d'en donner une idée en quelques pages. Il y a ses romans comme les Misérables, Notre Dame de Paris. Il y a sa poésie, dont l'inspiration varie de purement, poétique, à prophétique, tendre, passionnée, historique et se termine, tendrement. Il ya sa polémique politique, il y a ses dessins, son énorme correspondance Victor Hugo, admiré par beaucoup, critiqué par d'autres, reste un des géants de la littérature française.

Elle avait pris ci pli ...

Elle avait pris ce pli dans son age enfantine
De venir dans ma chambre un peu chaque matin.
Je l'attendais ainsi qu'un rayon qu'on espère;
Elle entrait, et disait : Bonjour mon petit père;
Prenait ma plume, ouvrait mes livres, s'asseyait
Sur mon lit, dérangeait mes papiers, et riait,
Puis soudain s'en allait comme un oiseau qui passe. Alors, je reprenais, la tête un peu moins, lasse, mon oeuvre interrompue, et, tout en écrivant
Parmi mes manuscrits je rencontrais souvent,
quelque arabesque folle et qu'elle avait tracée,
Et mainte page blanche entre ses mains froissée,
Où, je ne sais comment, venaient mes plus doux vers
Elle aimait Dieu, les fleurs, les astres, les prés verts
Et c'était un esprit avant d'être une femme.
Son regard reflétait la clarté de son âme.

Elle me consolait sur tout à tous momens. Oh! que de soirs d'hivers
radieux et charmants

Passés à raisonner langue, histoire et grammaire
Mes quatre enfants groupés sur mes genoux, leur mère
Tout près, quelques amis causant au coin du feu!
J'appelais cette vie être content de peu!
Et dire qu'elle est morte! Hélas que Dieu m'assiste!
Je n'étais jamais gai quand je la sentais triste;
J'étais morne au milieu du bal le plus joyeux
Si j'avais, en partant, vu quelque ombre sur ses yeux.

Les Contemplations (1856)

Vers dédiés à Léopoldine, fille ainée du poète morte dans un naufrage en 1843.
à l'âge de 19 ans.

Après la Bataille

Mon père, ce héros au sourire si doux
Suivi d'un seul hussard qu'il aimait entre tous
Pour sa grande bravoure et pour sa haute taille
Parcourait à cheval, le soir d'une bataille
Le champ couvert de morts, sur qui tombait la nuit
Il lui sembla dans l'ombre entendre un faible bruit
C'était un Espagnol de l'armée en déroute
Qui se traînait sanglant sur le bord de la route,
Râlant, brisé, livide et mort plus qu'à moitié
Et qui disait: — À boire, à boire, par pitié! —

The Insider

Three years ago, a new teacher, Ms. Lanier, asked my sophomore homeroom class if anyone were interested in working on a new school magazine. In a mood I still can't explain, I volunteered. That year, behind spray-painted covers, the newborn INSIDER introduced the beginnings of Radio Central (1972 on the intercom), Teen Angel, and various all-original titles including "Dear Gene," "Quotable Quotes" and "Ro-land Rubbish." That year our fearless staff, headed by Kirk Johnson, published, on mimeographed paper, seven issues of drawings, news and sports stories, poetry, short stories, and articles representing the entire Country Day School.

For 1972-73, under the leadership of Bert Smith, and the continuing presence of faculty advisor, Ms. Lanier, the INSIDER experimented with professional publishers for two issues, then switched to the school's new scanning machine. These four issues introduced student surveys, photographs, and paid advertisements. Again, the material used was from the entire school.

Pam Dave, Business Manager; Bill Price, Editor-in-Chief

Bill Price, Leslie Russell, James Ross, Danny Youngblood, Tina Lowe, Gene Carr

This year, the staff has decided to take the INSIDER in a new direction. It is publishing only the senior high's literary and artistic talents. Only one issue is to be published, and the quality and reproduction of students' works are expected to be better than the previous issues. As this year's editor-in-chief, I sincerely hope that the magazine will be a point of pride for students and school.

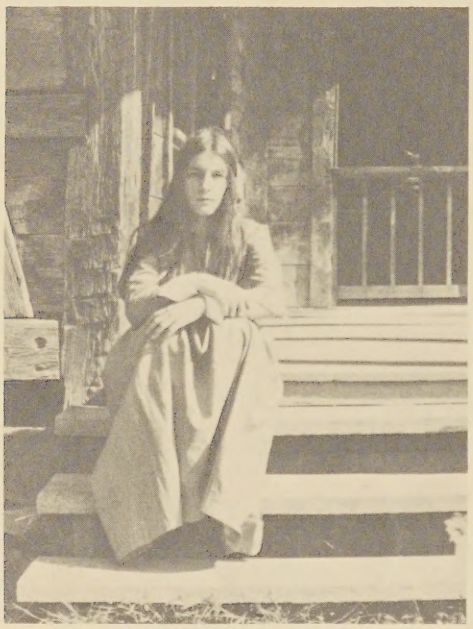
OTHER SPRINGS IN OTHER YEARS

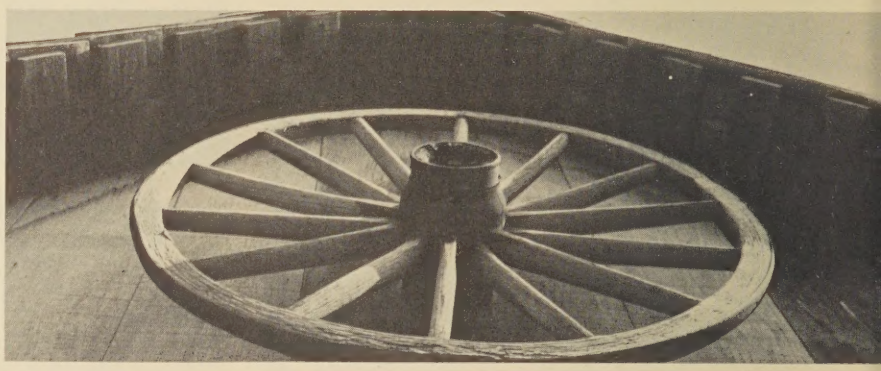
The old man walked through the spring morning, telling his grandson of other springs in other years. There was a spryness in his step that belied his ninety-six years, and he had somehow managed to forget his cane when he left the house. The old man remembered how he had made pop-guns and whistles for his grandson when his grandson was only a tad-pole of a boy.

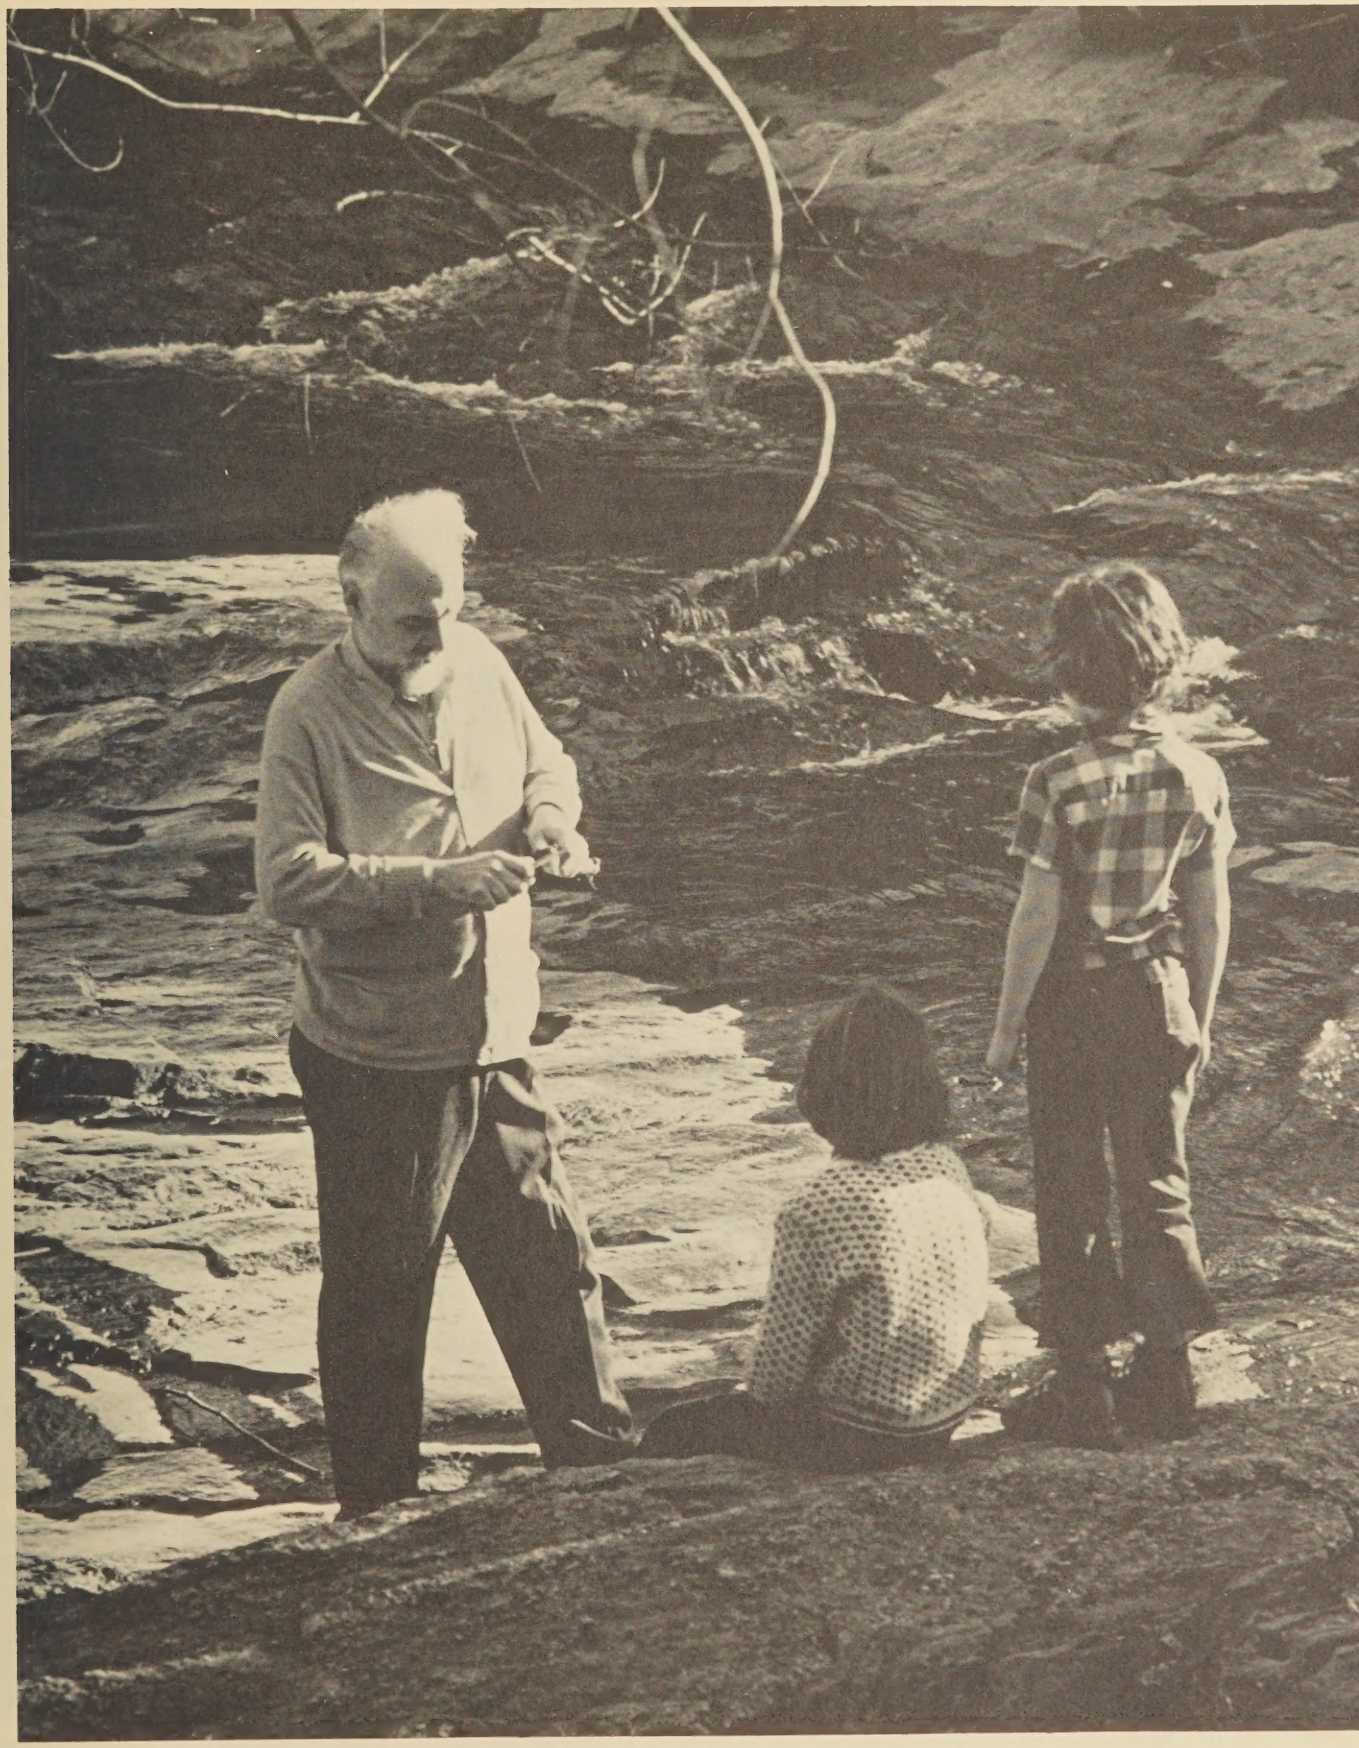
The grandson remembered, too.

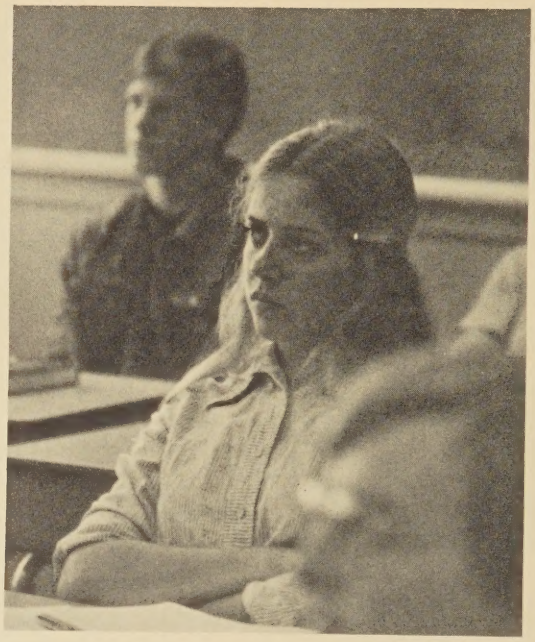
Perhaps that was why their steps this spring day had led to the creek bank where the elderberry trees still grow. And, as on another spring day long ago, the old man fished in his pocket and got out his pocketknife and cut a limb from an elderberry bush and began whittling.

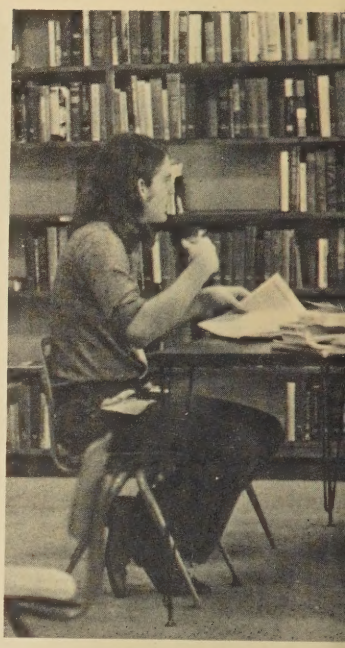
Spring had come again.

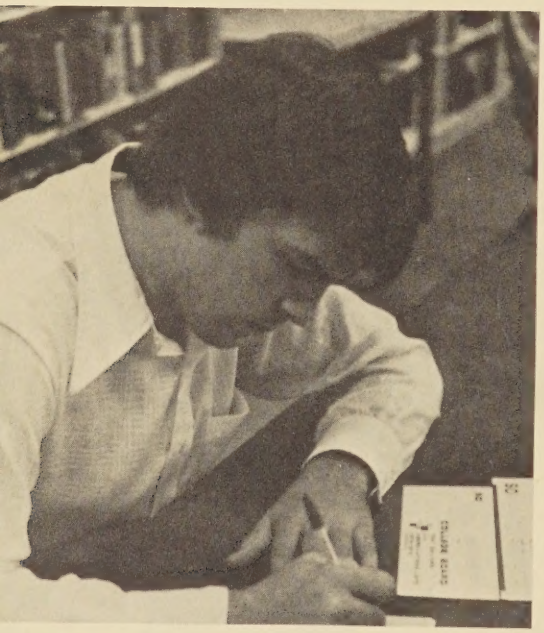


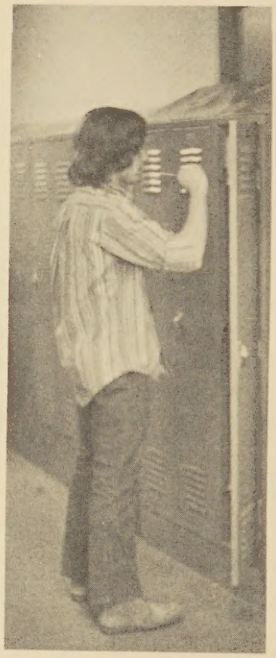


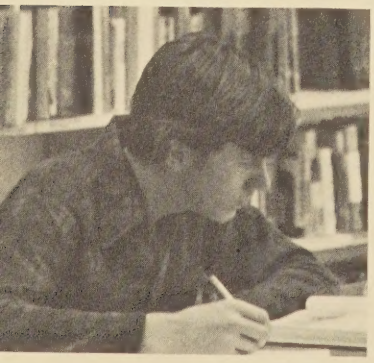


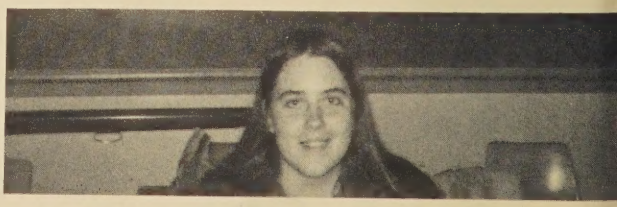


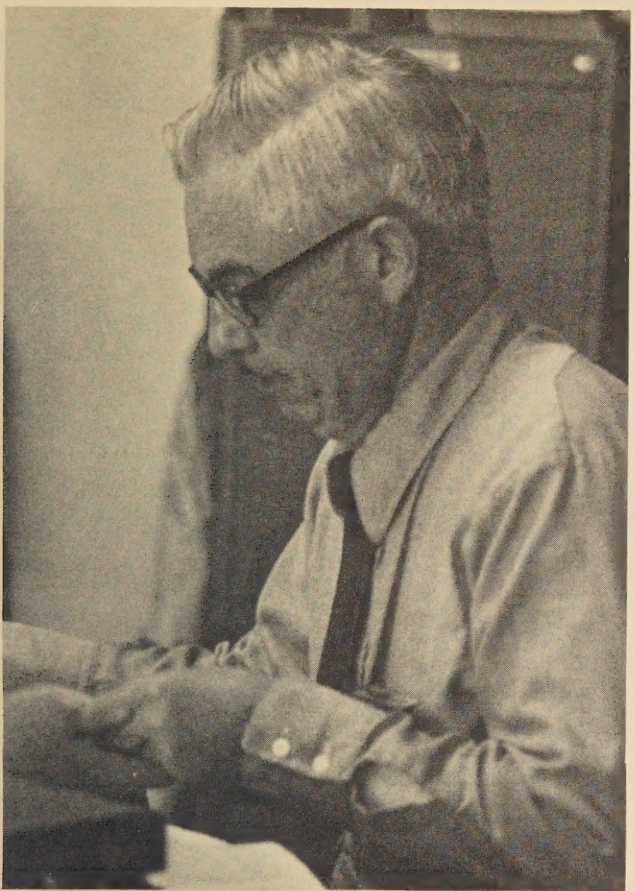


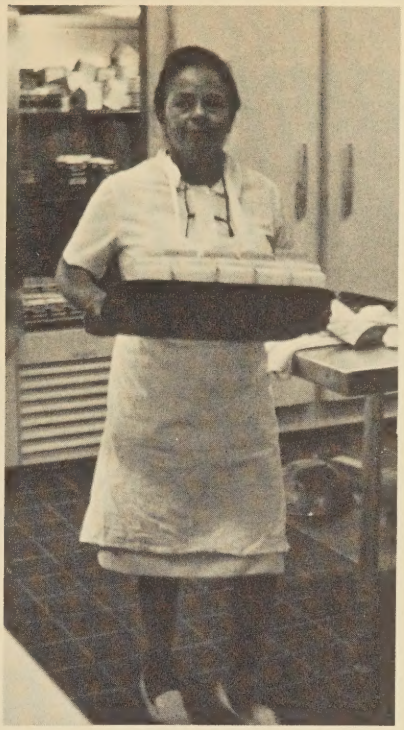


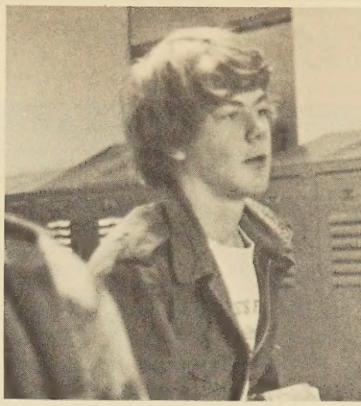


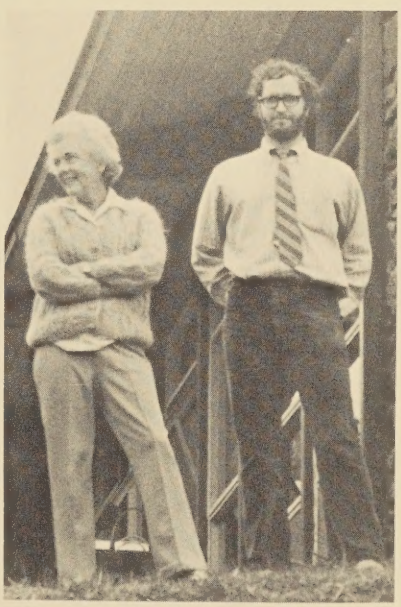


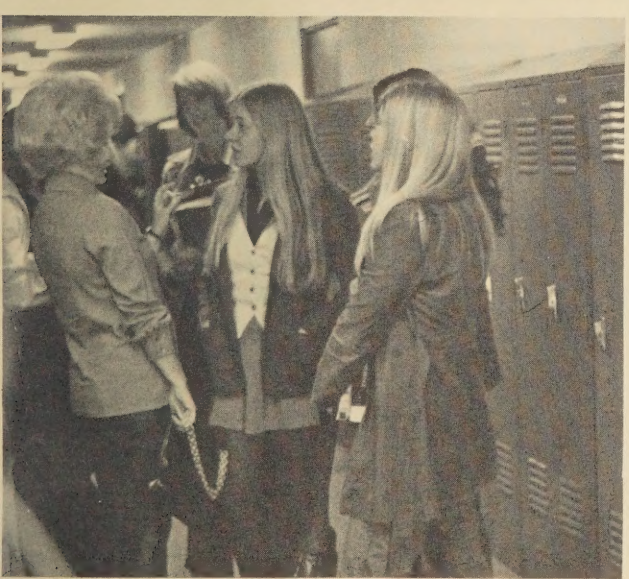


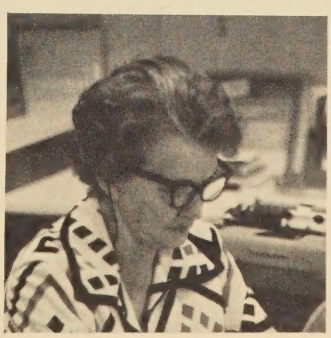


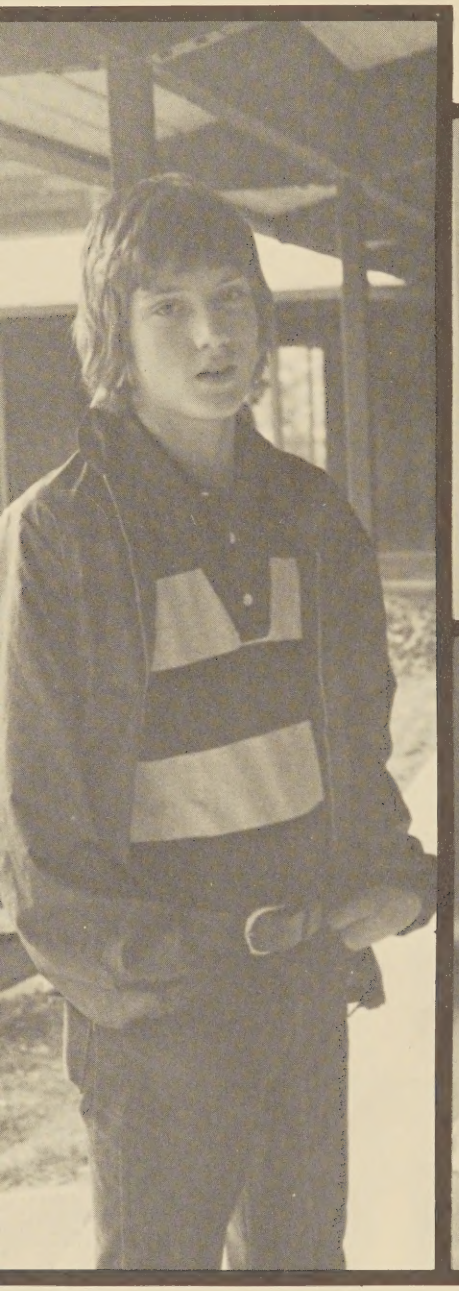


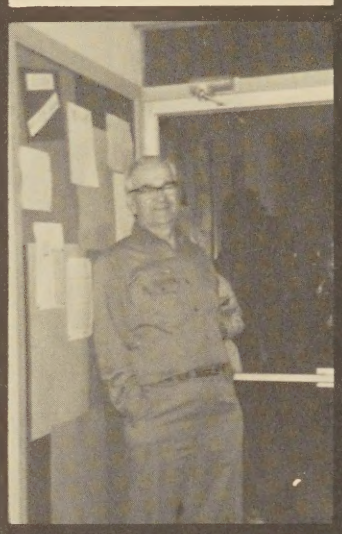


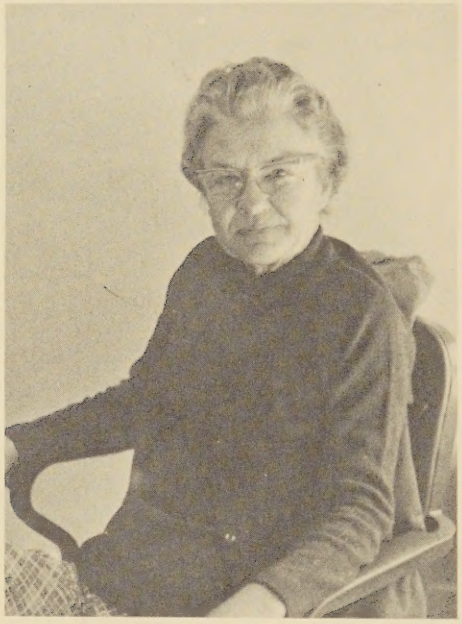


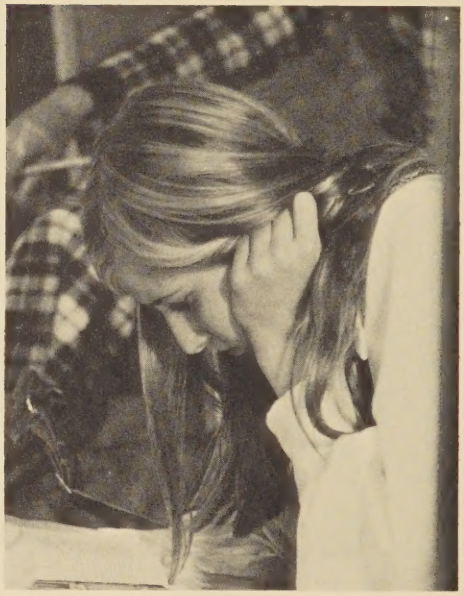


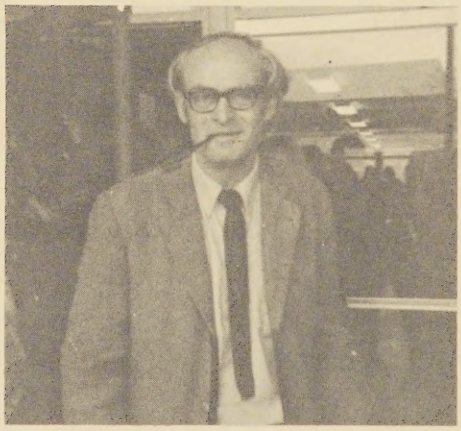


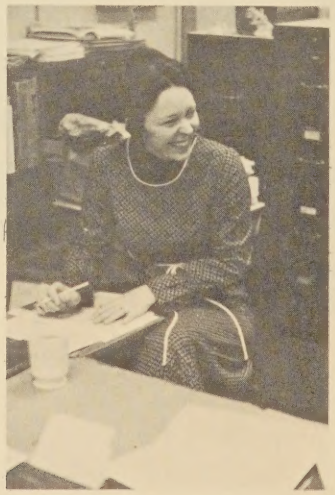


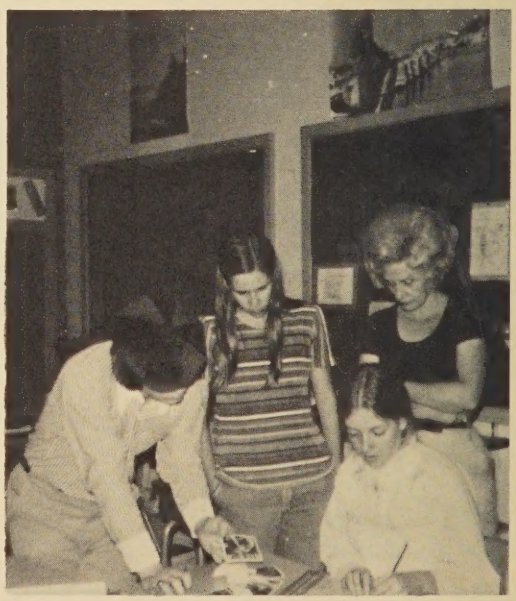


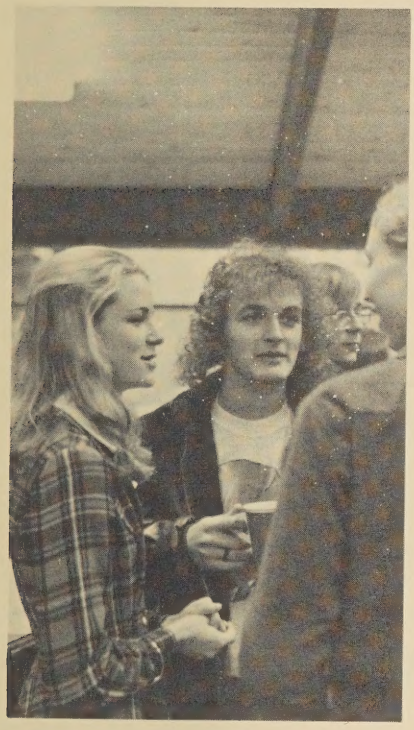


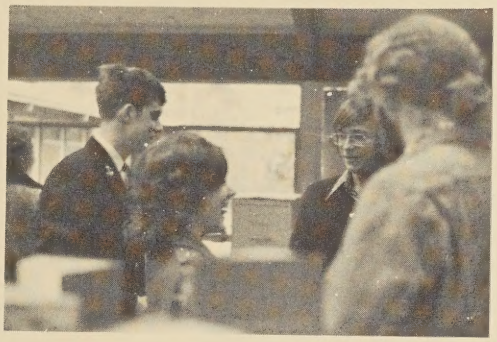


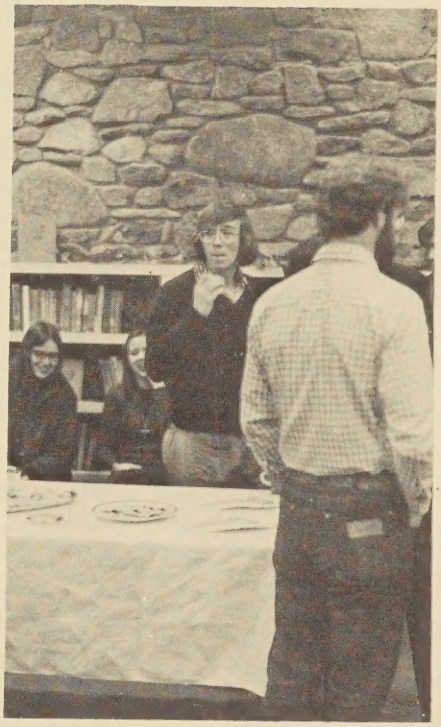












IN CALVARY CHURCHYARD . . .

There's a wind that blows between the worlds and riding it are sounds that tease the imagination.

It gives a voice to the long dead and weaves a picture of events in time out of memory.

For those with an uncommon ear, the wind that whispers in the tall pines that stand like sentinels in the churchyard conjures dreams.

So come along to the churchyard of Calvary and wander along the twisting paths beneath the pines in the blue of twilight.

Yes, there are voices in the wind that plays through the tall pines in the churchyard of Calvary parish.

For it is a wind that blows between the worlds and riding it are sounds that tease the imagination.

Listen sharp the next time you stand beneath the tall, whispering pines in the churchyard when the blue of twilight is upon the land.

Perhaps the wind will send a voice whispering out of time . . .

Elegance Lost

Once I knew a man
So stately and trim,
We children were scared
To even talk to him.

Accidentally I found him
(So elegant and neat)
Perched like a bald eagle
On the old outhouse seat.

Even tho' I should live
To be a hundred and four,
He'll be perched like an eagle
In my mind ever more!
